

The map displays the San Francisco Bay Area with a grid overlay. The distribution of 1000 simulated locations is shown as circles of varying sizes and colors. The colors represent different levels of density or probability, with a gradient from blue (low density) to red (high density). The largest circles, indicating the highest density, are concentrated in the central urban area, particularly around the San Francisco Peninsula and the East Bay. Smaller circles are scattered throughout the region, including in the North Bay and the South Bay. The map also shows major roads and water bodies, providing a geographical context for the simulated locations.
